REFERENCE(S)

1. GRISKIN-2's replacement told Identity 1 on 23 July that Identity 1 opened a package containing an RS-6 W/T set which had been left in custody of GRISKIN. He reportedly did this because it had GRISKIN-1's name on the wrapper and he thought it might be "something" GRISKIN-1, who was returning to PRIME PCS, might want to take with him. It is probable that this was just a pretext because GRISKIN-1 who was vacationing could have answered any questions about it had Identity 1 asked him about it before he left or after he came back. Also GRISKIN-2 could have told him the package belonged to us if he had asked her about it before she left in July.

2. Identity 1 who has seen these packages come and go without knowing what was in them may have believed the package contained explosives which would endanger GRISKIN safety and therefore that it was his duty to open and examine it.

3. According to the GEMANAL arrangement with GRISKIN (with which GRISKIN-1 and GRISKIN-2 both were familiar), packages (W/T equipment) arrive addressed to GRISKIN-1. He does not open these but holds them for a representative of SOB. By the same token we deposit properly wrapped and addressed recovered W/T equipment there for them to forward to GEMANAL through normal ORACID channels. The RS-6 in this case had been recovered from a no-longer-needed cache in the Fall of 1958 and was left with GRISKIN for an indefinite period in anticipation of possible use in W/T field training in Austria. (This would save shipping one from GEMANAL for the purpose.)

4. This package had been wrapped in heavy paper and was marked with GRISKIN's name. When Identity 1 saw it on 23 July, it was wrapped in different paper and marked "classified". GRISKIN-2's replacement said Identity 1 had done the rewrapping. It is probable that Identity 1 saw the equipment, but, it is not known how closely he examined it.
